“ Wendell was my grandfather. Known as Papa to all the grandkids. I am his 3rd child in the set of 4 he has not included the great grandkids. There is alot of great memories we've had with him and shared with him through his life on earth and through our lives so far. We spent alot of time with him while we were younger learning how to cut leaves with his pocket knife, picking up acorns and taken the hats off, throwing rocks into the lake and fishing off the dock swimming around in the lake and much more. He loved to take us on his boat and just cruise at a gentle pace. He took his time with each one of us and loved us all the same. When I got older him and i would talk about cars and how we would modify his ole green truck and look at magazines for hours on end. When I started to learn to drive. I would ask him why are you driving so slow and turning so wide. His response was always "I'm saving my tires and there's no need for jackrabbit starts." He didnt let me drive much but when he did it was in the ole green truck. It might not be fast, and loud but it got us around were we needed to go. When I got into modifying my cars and truck hed always wanna come out and see what I've done to it now and ask what was next always the worst question anyone could ask me. When I got married to my wife later down the road hed always tell me I got a great lady and to keep her. One night he dedicated a song to my wife and I while we were at one of his shows and while he played it he smiled the biggest smile. The hardest thing to see is one of your role models go through the struggles hes gone through in the last 2 years. I am glad he finally is at peace and knowing we will see him again. The one thing I miss the most is his, "Hey boy" when i walk into the house. We love you miss you and we will all see you one day. Love you papa.
